

"My heart's desire and prayer to God for them is that they may be saved." Romans 10:1

When the First Sunday of Advent arrives on November 27, 2011, all English-speaking Catholics will use a new, corrected translation of the Holy Mass. These columns are given so that we can all be fully prepared to embrace the adjustments.

We turn this week to the way we will respond to the Ecce Agnus Dei following the Lamb of God. As we look at this text, it's helpful to remember that it's based on the passage from St. Matthew's Gospel about the centurion who approaches the Lord and humbly asks that He heal his servant, knowing that he is unworthy to have Jesus enter his house. (Mt 8:5-11)

After the Lamb of God is sung or recited, the current translation contains the following words:

Priest: This is the Lamb of God who takes away the sins of the world. Happy are those who are called to his supper.

People: Lord, I am not worthy to receive you, but only say the word and I shall be healed.

The text of the people's response comes from the Gospel passage above. The centurion answers the Lord, in the only response humble enough to be fitting of Jesus' invitation. Truly, we are not worthy, yet through an act of sheer grace, our souls can be made suitable for the divine presence.

So much of the Mass finds its origin in Sacred Scripture. This response to the Ecce Agnus Dei ("Behold the Lamb of God") is a prime example of such a text. While the current translation "points" to the Gospel passage, the new translation actually is the Gospel passage:

Priest: Behold the Lamb of God, behold him who takes away the sins of the world. Blessed are those called to the supper of the Lamb.

People: Lord, I am not worthy that you should enter under my roof, but only say the word and my soul shall be healed.

This highlights one of the three reasons for improving the English translation of the Mass: greater fidelity to the Scriptural roots of the texts. Once the new translation "sets in" with the people, when the Gospel passage in question is recited, their ears will immediately perk up as if to say, "Hey, I recognize that! That is from Mass!"

The second clause of the Priest's part contains two improvements. First, the Latin beati can in some cases be rendered as "happy", but to do so in today's culture risks reducing the experience to mere emotion. Beatitude is the noun that we are looking for rather than happiness, but the best rendering as an adjective is blessed. The second change reflects not only a Scriptural reality, but a theological one as well. Some will recognize the word Agnus in the phrase cenam Agni, which translates "supper of the Lamb." In the old translation, the word "Lamb" was mysteriously dropped from the phrase. This is not only a mistranslation of the Latin, but also a failure to connect the Eucharist not with a generic meal ("supper") but with the Heavenly feast described in the Book of Revelation. As many have pointed out, there is only one Mass. Each time we are present at the Holy Sacrifice of the Mass, we are present (1) at the foot of Calvary, (2) at the Last Supper, (3) at every instance of the Mass throughout all of history (past and present), and (4) at the Wedding Feast of the Lamb that constitutes the Heavenly Liturgy.

Finally, in the second clause of the people's response, the Latin word anima appears. Translated "soul", the improved translation restores the word in "and my soul shall be healed." There are several points during the Mass where venial sins are cleansed, but this is the last moment before receiving the Eucharistic Lord. There is a connection that professing our unworthiness and pleading with the Lord to enter and heal our soul shares with receiving Him. This should serve as a reminder of the connection shared between Confession and the Holy Eucharist. Specifically mentioning the soul helps us to understand that we not only receive Christ into our bodies but also into our very being.
